Sophia Contemporary Gallery in London is presenting a group show titled “Shifting Landscapes” featuring six contemporary American artists, which remains current until June 23, 2017.

The artists explore abstraction through painting, photography and sculpture. The six artists are Afruz Amighi, Iva Gueorguieva, Herman Mejia, Amir Nikravan, Holton Rower and Hannah Whitaker. The exhibition reflects on the evolving nature of American art, casting a light on the diversity of contemporary approaches to abstraction. The works explore the artists’ impact on the landscape of art and American culture, across generations and disciplines. Through a variety of points of view and artistic practices, “Shifting Landscapes” provides a window into contemporary abstraction in America today. By reinterpreting American abstraction through the prism of their own varied cultural backgrounds and artistic heritage, the artists urgently reaffirm the diversity and openness in American culture, at a pivotal point in the nation’s history.

The exhibition is on view at Sophia Contemporary Gallery, 11 Grosvenor Street, Mayfair, London, W1K 4QB, UK.
